Hi Mares,

I'm not sure what the point of this post is, but you seem to be both implying something nasty, and bragging about it.

I think that if you take pleasure in hatred, you should keep that to yourself.

Nobody wants a "creep" to run around. But nobody also should want to witch hunt an innocent man. That is exactly what you are doing.

So what?

Hi

Wow, I think you're wrong on two counts!

First of all, I've had too much success with dating to be undatable. You don't know me so I guess it's easy in your mind to conjure up a monster.

Second of all, people have made very serious accusations on this blog that come from nowhere. They aren't saying I'm undatable, they're using something, the knuckleheads.

Who cares if people judge each other in dating? I can tell that you're clearly unbalanced because of the "all caps" and the judgmental words. I do yes sometimes and vice versa.

Just last night I was walking around 1am home from the all-night grocery store and a gal stopped me. I was wearing my headphones so I didn't hear. It was a little too weird for me. I don't drink at all so I don't really know much about (nor do I care for) drunk people.

But, she seemed really desperate, so I walked back with her to Porter Square and got her a taxi. She made repeated attempts to ask where I live okay.

The thing about that story is, it's not juicy enough. See, people who gossip need to make it fun by exaggerating. And because of the old-limey at normally show restraint I feel like they can lash out without consequence.

It's pretty ugly.

Flash forward to this year's Monster March. You were supposedly RUNNING this thing, and when I tried locating you to find out what was going on, you were just the flying hell was going on. I did more directing of people at that event than you did, mister chatting up the young gals in costumes that paid no mind to the fact THEN, when it was time for the young ones to go home, there was ever-so-conveniently a COMPLETE AND TOTAL POWER OUTAGE THAT BROUGHT THE EVENT TO A HALTING. I doubt in that particular case being just an unfortunate coincidence... still..

So on the follow-up, you had "extra tickets" to the TOMB thing to offer up to people, but instead of, you know, giving them to the people who worked for and do gave off a generally lcky vibe.

Oh, and then you decided to spam everyone and their (children) mother with your "Wheel Questions" thing and you didn't even answer the real, important questions when you don't have an organized bone in your body and have no communication skills whatsoever? (and THAT was submitted BEFORE I knew that you were the day.) I don't expect an adequate answer to that, but hey, you didn't answer it then either.

Hi

That's actually a good question.

Yes, the MIT thing was found to be baseless. That's why there were never charges.

Here's the thing though. Under the guise of a "community warning", various well-meaning but ultimately rude people asserted to the world that I was a threat.

This plus the internet has created a permanent bias. Now whenever I do "anything", people want to view it in the worst way.

Take a look at my website, <http://WheelQuestions.org>

I spent 1500 unpaid hours and $15,000 of my own money over two years on an art project that has made thousands of people happy. MIT project too, which also made thousands of people happy.

And despite all this, people have "so" much hatred. It's really a case of people believing what they "want" to believe. I think some people lose their senses. It's like when the US invaded Iraq. There was a "group think" on the assumption that they'd have WMDs.

The whole thing has been accelerated by an internet stalker that I have, and the people who love to gossip and get duped into being in the middle of it.

People are only victims when they are forced.

When I was 17 I had a boyfriend who was 24. And I had the opportunity to drink alcohol and smoke pot (though I did have been full of shit because I wasn't). And if the cops or some random community members tried to stop me from it and they'd have been pretty wrong.

What you've just said is illegal

Hi there,

What you've just done is called slander. Or maybe it's libel. I get those confused.

If you think that I've been, what, knocking out underage girls and screwing them, for God's sake,

If you don't think that, why would you say it?

I know, it makes you feel all edgy and brave to dare to say things that are "in your face". But the bravery. People don't respect you more. They just see you as off-balance.

Well... it's true that some people will give you kudos. They are people who habitually see the world into a "story" that feels right to them.

Let me put it this way. Over two years, I put 1500 hours and $15,000 into an art project that had <http://WheelQuestions.org>

If you read through it, and your "gut instinct" is to call me a creep... I think you need a new gut in things a certain way that you're blind to just saying, "ok, maybe I was wrong."

Re: How is that bullying?

That's your way of bullying.

You bully all the time, and you cloak it in this "peace and love" passive-aggression.

You are a ball of hate masquerading as a giver of love.

Think about this. You won't, because you're so locked in self-delusion, but you should.

Hi

I'd like you to think about what you've just said for a moment.

You're going to deliberately destroy someone's character, and then you pretend that you're doing the community a service.

Let's face it. You don't know me, and everything you've heard is either an 'allegation' or pure rumor. And yet you've decided to become judge & jury here.

What you don't realize is that you're being manipulated. I have an Internet stalker who is good at pushing people's buttons. This Internet stalker knows the handle. You have become an unwitting accomplice of somebody's grudge.

Obviously, nobody wants a 'creep' around. But nobody should want to lynch an innocent man either.

Take a look at my art project. It's at <http://www.questions.org>

I put 1500 hours and $15,000 of my own money into a community project that made thousands of people happy. That doesn't prove anything, of course, it doesn't that say that you're basically determined to see me as creepy regardless of the facts?

And once you've taken leave of the facts, isn't that a kind of insanity?

(Three months later): ME: Where's the rent? Are you guys looking for jobs?

ROOMMATES: Oh fuck looking for jobs. We just need a chance!

ME: I think you guys should move out.

ROOMMATES: We don't like being told that we're fuck-ups. Now we hate you!

ME: Seriously, guys. Pay rent or go.

ROOMMATES: Now we can destroy you by making wild allegations! Yay! We're haters!

You've seen me fuck with people, eh? Have I been using people's names on the Internet? I don't think so.

If that is your view of that situation, you should be locked away from society.

You harass people, get called out on it, then say you didn't do it because you weren't arrested?

You created a whole dating website to lure women, then emailed them when they didn't want to be contacted by you, and got busted.

Re: Turil's comments

At the risk of getting the Internet all over me (oww!), I'm intrigued enough to take a stab at this one, because there is something really weird about it to my ears. Let's see

I think in the first statement @turil was focusing more on the nature of teenagers and childhood, and questioning how we deal with age. The second was more specific: 24, and while I might have missed something in that gigantic thread, I don't read Turil's comments as saying he was offering these teenagers anything in any sort of respect. Comparing Jonmon to her boyfriend from years ago surely makes no sense to her, and it probably shouldn't -- Jonmon has a long history of being a very special case, at experiences.

My initial impression -- and I admit I have not been reading all the comments on every entry in this community everywhere -- is that Turil seems to have a lot of past history that would sound a lot more normal to davis_square readers if they were coming from nearly anyone else. Consider these in isolation and try to think of who else might believe

- We should try to see the good in others.
- Being mean is always bad.
- When people on the Internet "pile on", it is always creepy to watch (especially if you've met them in person and they behaved differently then?).
- Jonmon is a tragic figure.
- When someone is reviled in their community, it's disingenuous to point solely to their economic status and other demographic factors when determining what their "stat" only meaningful reference point).
- Our society makes childhood longer than it should, and that has various undesirable effects.
- Talking about teenagers (let alone children in general) and sex (or alcohol or drugs) is a conversational third rail in our culture, even for those of us who were recently

You can argue any of these points passionately either way, but none of them are particularly novel or unique to Turil. Also I might be wrong about what everyone on all this stuff I skimmed, disclaimer, disclaimer, etc.. :P

Okay, I'm going to go wipe -- no, scrub -- the Internet from my hands and wait impatiently for the musical. No, seriously. I think it cries out for some sort of dramatization. @turil should each write their own musical versions of it.

I have no opinion here except to ask: do you know either of these people? I am assuming you don't know this 'Jonmon' character. If you do know this 'Laura' contributing here?

And if you don't know either of these people then what the fuck are you doing making comments at all? Cheers.

Re: Just curious: how many people here have first hand experience of this 'Jonmon'?

Please explain. I have no association at all with this 'Jonmon' character but this whole thread seems mostly the worst kind of hearsay, innuendo and DS snark. No or person (and most "because they read it on the internet"). Did he actually DO anything to you or anyone you know? Is there any basis for all this vitriol? I ask because - maybe this 'Jonmon' pissed some people off at some point and those people rule the DS snark. I have no idea but the lack of any significant information (news, posts, etc.) is a bit odd.

To take this seriously for a moment...

A whole lot of people have said that there is basis for the vitriol, and described the basis; it's a fair decision to say "you are people I don't know, talking on the internet to you, you have:

- this thread where Q purgator101 talks about living with him

2/4/13

davis_square: Today's Somerville Police Blog

- this thread where Q ren newman links to a number of news articles

There are others in the overall thread but oh my god I am not going through that chaff at this point ;)

There is actually a difficult community issue here, I think, in terms of how a community should deal with allegations of sexual assault or harassment. On the one hand the "innocent until proven guilty" ethos we have in our court system is valuable. On the other hand, victims of assault, harassment, &c. do not always want to go to court. Our community has a responsibility to protect our members from people who repeatedly behave in a predatory fashion.

The snark can get to be a bit much, but doesn't actually seem to be the real issue here; I think the real issue is "Is it OK to warn people about someone else in a way that might harm them?" In this particular case, the cat is out of the bag and has eaten growing pills and is now in the open.

Personally, both from the things I've seen publically (in this thread and elsewhere) and the things I've seen privately (which obviously I can't share, since they're private), people avoid Jonmon is the best way I can think of to keep them safe. I would encourage my female friends, in particular, not to speak to him or to enter into an especially lacking that private information; in disagreeing, though, I hope you keep in mind that it's not just "woo-woo" snark, this is something people have actually done.

Out of curiosity, what would you find to be conclusive proof or evidence? After all, as he is so fond of stating, he has never formally been convicted or charged with anything.

For what it's worth, there are many, many more people who are not involved at all with the DSLJ who have also had personal first hand experience with the head of a local LARP organization that he tried to pitch Midnight Seduction to, and another was someone who answered an ad for housemates at a housemates to participate in his "play parties".

But again, that's all second hand, so take from that what you will. But I am really wondering what you would accept as conclusive...anything, since the personal experiences of the members and the community at large.

Re: To take this seriously for a moment...

I don't know right now what I would consider "conclusive proof or evidence." Do you know him? Is anything you have said based on your personal impressions and opinions are merely hearsay and irrelevant. (Sorry - I know that's hard to hear. My clients are lawyers and some of their brusqueness is not my fault.)

The generalizing and snow-balling that occurs so easily in this type of medium (and the weird pleasure people seem to take in it) was what I was about this 'Jon mon' fellow but this sort of smashing and bashing goes on quite a bit here in this DS "community." It seems sort of a 'sport' for some people. I am hesitant.

As to the specific "charges" - all the sex stuff - seems really sketchy. He may well be a creep - but people are making him out to be something far worse than he is. There is a law against giving them alcohol and if that is proven then he should face whatever the penalty is. The rest is speculation.

Re: To take this seriously for a moment...

In fact, "this" has never happened before in this community. Maybe a tiny version of it that passed quickly, but not 600 comments worth and so easily dismiss.

Tell me, why exactly would all of these people, many of whom don't even know each other, make up experiences about the same guy? It does you, most of us have LJs that are well-connected to our real life, real friends, real faces, real names, jobs, etc. You could be anybody at all just made shit up. I, otoh, would have plenty of fall-out to deal with if I did such a thing.

Why you feel the need to tell women who were sexually harassed by this guy that they're full of it, I don't know, but way to blame the victims.

Again, do you think mrpet, the roommate, laura47, me, and the various other people who've said yes, we know him and have experience with people who are relaying stories from people not in this comm are making it up? Why?

Since this thread began, several of my LJ friends have posted in their own journals about their experiences with him, but they're not going to anything to prove to you, and/or they have no interest in rehashing an unpleasant experience in a public space.

I'm going to generously assume that if you did actually know any of us (and no, we don't all know each other), you'd take it a lot more seriously.

I can answer that

Hi

I can answer that. Socrates said that the person who is the most good is good even though hated widely. And the person who is the most knew about character assassination.

When the original accusation was made in 2003, the person who did it didn't just go to the newspapers. She also started an email war, stunned and I figured it would die down, which it did. Unfortunately, thanks to Google, I guess nothing will ever die down again, and the

You actually said it in your post. "When this many people believe something it must be true." Oh really? A billion people believe that Joe people believed that Iraq had weapons of mass destruction, or that Obama was a muslim.

When you say, "When this many people believe something it must be true", that's exactly how something like this rolls out of control. By just nasty, have said terrible things about me, that it's become kind of a loose 'fact' when the truth is that there's nothing there at all.

Even when I do a big community project, like Wheel Questions, it doesn't seem to make a dent. Take a look at my website, <http://Wheel>. $15,000 of my own money into a project where I answered 8,000 questions about life. It was wonderful. You would think that if we're go system - that I would get a bunch of kudos for this.

And for other cool things I do, like WeirdBostonEvents.org and so forth. I've done so many cool community things in my lifetime. Don't let me slam me around.

That was a long time ago. I would like to think that he has had plenty of time since then to grow up. My impression, however, from things ranging from comments from this thread lead me to believe he has at best become a bit more sophisticated in his methods.

For a small, immediate example, attempting to slam Laura47 as "that geeky kid from MIT roleplaying" when he has a long history as a roleplayer and gamewriter strikes me as a bit of a stretch. Replies frozen

Today's Somerville Police Blog

[excerpt] Patrolman John Thermidor reported at least 25-30 teenagers in the apartment, as well as people on the stairs leading up to the second floor. He asked to talk to an adult, but there was no response from anyone.

A few minutes later, a man came down from the second floor and identified himself as Jonathan Monsarrat, 41, the resident and host of the party, according to the report. Thermidor told him to inform his guests that the party was over and they have to leave, but Monsarrat allegedly became argumentative and refused to comply. He assured Thermidor that there was no alcohol at the party. According to the report, the officer informed him that he had seen teenagers with beer bottles. [/excerpt]

I actually may have...

Hill

I can't keep track but if you really care, I've told the entire story about ten times throughout the thread to various people. Here it is for the 11th time.

Before I begin, I ask you to put on your rational hat. You want to judge me, I deserve that much.

In 2003, I was accused of email harassment. The gal who did it brought some emails to the police. I was not charged, because there was nothing harassing about the emails. The gal was just wrong.

Have you ever had a breakup and had terrible things said about you? That's what it was like. Thank god the police told her to go away. But she didn't go away. She went to the newspapers.

Now, the thing has taken on a life of its own. Even though I was cleared, a lot of people will not only assume the worst, they "propagate" it. As a result, we have a kind of group think going on here. It's like with the Iraq war. All the world leaders and CIA were so sure that there were WMD's in Iraq that they all kind of supported each other.

By this time there are "so" many people who've heard unsubstantiated rumors that I'm a creep, that they don't really need any facts. They simply assume that if there are "so" many rumors, it must be true.

Take a look at my websites. One is <http://WeirdBostonEvents.org> where I've blogged for 4 years, unpaid, on fun events around town.

Another is <http://WheelQuestions.org>, where I spent 1500 unpaid hours and $15,000 of my own money over two years, because I thought it would be an adventure and help people. I answered 8,000 questions all by handwriting! And nearly 500,000 people saw the installation. I made thousands of people happy.

I have a lifetime of doing community service projects like this. I volunteered to play the MIT Beaver. I've helped out or run numerous students clubs and real world companies.

Unfortunately, the people who gossip don't see it, because it isn't in their nature to see it. The way that gossip works is this... it's no fun if it isn't juicy.

Let's say for example, that I have a roommate who is behind on her rent. After three months, she owes me $1800 and has to move out. I don't know if you've ever had to fire anyone?? But trust me the person being fired (or asked to move out, in this case) never says "I'm sorry". They always invent some self-serving reason why they are the victim. I think it's just because, you know, I'm the guy saying all the time, where's the rent, where's the rent, right? Even if I do it delicately, I'm the one who's the messenger from reality. And reality is saying, "stop being so lazy and look for a job".

So then what I have is an angry ex-roommate with a chip on her shoulder. She knows that nothing illegal actually happened, so of course there's no police involvement. But can she anonymously post on the Internet? Sure! It's "so" easy to believe it. Here's how it works.

Then the assumption of guilt feeds into the original "creep" feeling. And it feeds on itself.

It's pretty awful. I mean, it's awful enough simply not being appreciated for the good stuff I've done, and having some of the bad turned from "a mistake" into "he's a creep".

But thanks to the Internet, flame wars like these cast a permanent stain on my reputation. I can't get a job, I can't meet people, it's affected my family, my friends, anyone I want to date.

It's very much like having an Internet stalker (and in fact I do have at least one that I know about).

Some of you get duped into thinking that you're "helping the community" by passing along a 'warning' to others. The real people at the base of this are the ones with so much rage that they just don't care and they're starting the flamewars. They're the ones pushing your buttons and getting you to do their bidding. They know if they say the right thing, they can draw you into helping them try to destroy me.

My advice is, don't get duped.

Then the assumption of guilt feeds into the original "creep" feeling. And it feeds on itself.

It's pretty awful. I mean, it's awful enough simply not being appreciated for the good stuff I've done, and having some of the bad turned from "a mistake" into "he's a creep".

But thanks to the Internet, flame wars like these cast a permanent stain on my reputation. I can't get a job, I can't meet people, it's affected my family, my friends, anyone I want to date.

It's very much like having an Internet stalker (and in fact I do have at least one that I know about).

Some of you get duped into thinking that you're "helping the community" by passing along a 'warning' to others. The real people at the base of this are the ones with so much rage that they just don't care and they're starting the flamewars. They're the ones pushing your buttons and getting you to do their bidding. They know if they say the right thing, they can draw you into helping them try to destroy me.

My advice is, don't get duped.

So the solution is to serve alcohol to minors? Clearly you're the victim here and we should all feel sorry for you.

Re: Here's the Complete Story from Johnny

Hi!

I didn't say anything my story about that. Because it's an ongoing case, I can't comment.

I'm simply pointing that a large number of people making unsubstantiated and anonymous grumblings does not amount to a hill of beans, and anyone who thinks I was guilty back in 2003 even though I was cleared... Is not being rational and needs to take a deep breath and do something else. Stop sitting at the computer. Call a friend, get your mind off of it.

Re: Here's the Complete Story from Johnny

He just doesn't get it. See, most people who are decent, non-scumbags, do not have to explain away their numerous instances of lecherousness. A decent person could possibly have ONE instance where their behavior is misconstrued. A decent person would have good friends back them up that indeed, they did nothing wrong. What we have here, is not that. What we have here is a person who repeatedly acts in an unbecoming manner, and when confronted by his behavior either lies about it, blames the victim, or even more bizarrely claims that because there is no law against it, it is OK to do it. There's no law against a lot of horrible social behavior. THAT DOES NOT MEAN SAID BEHAVIOR IS SOCIALLY ACCEPTABLE.

He's like a birther - he's got an answer for every situation and story. He just doesn't understand the bigger picture, of what his actions look like on a wide scale.

To this DAY I am sickened with myself for not reporting him to the police when he told me he was taking his 17 year old "friend" to New York to meet a guy.

They asked me to lie to her mother for her. I declined. I then left the house. I should have done something.

I guess you're a liar now...

Hi Julie,

Not only is this not true, there's not even a grounding in reality. I actually can't think of anything real that you could have drawn this from, even through exaggerations.

Let's face it. When you moved out, you owed me over $3,000. You made continual promises to pay, but were unable to, I guess you just didn't have the heart to job hunt. I know how this story goes. Look, sooner or later, I need to ask you for rent. I can't just let it slide forever.

But when I ask you for rent, what you're hearing is Reality knocking on your door. It was hardly my fault that you were breaking promises and drifting through life. But it was me bringing it to your attention, putting it in your face so to speak. So you had two choices, you could either own up, and apologize, or you could construct a story that made me the bad guy.

It's been harmless until now, but since you're posting shit about me online, it's no longer harmless. I suggest a truce. Take down your comments about me and I will do the same. I've never used your financial situation as an excuse for lashing out at you and I've never gossiped about you behind your back. I wish you well, at least, I did wish you well until about a minute ago, but if we can go back to the truce it'll be cool.

Johnny, there are a lot of people here who seem to have had bad experiences with you, and just telling them to shut up isn't going to change that. If you were such a good guy, it seems like there would be a much larger number of people who know from personal experience that you're a good guy, and those people would be willing to back up your side of the story; but that's not happening.

Instead, you seem to have about two defenders here, both of whom know nothing about you but object in general to the tenor of the discussion. Your own behavior here comes off more as wounded ego than anything else, and you haven't so far dared to submit your own post to the community explaining your own side of things in a consistent and coherent way; instead, you're just arguing back at each individual in any way you can, often with personal attacks.

Maybe your art installation really does define who you are. If it does, why not set aside the kinky party lifestyle for a while and just focus on that? If you go long enough without creeping people out (which it seems happens whether you intend it or not), it really will blow over; the problem is that, when stuff like this keeps happening, it becomes all people see of you.

Violation of LiveJournal abuse policiesLiveJournal's abuse policies are at <http://www.livejournal.com/abuse/policy.bml>

Under the section "Harassment", it says that "if a user makes a statement which encourages or incites others to harass another person in any way, access to that content will be disabled. This can also extend to entries in which harassment has not been explicitly called for, but is implied, at the discretion of the Abuse Prevention Team."

This is it. I'll give everyone here until Monday at 12pm to remove your comments from this board. At that point, I'm collecting every single one of them. I have already filed an abuse report with LiveJournal but won't call them until Monday at 12pm.

Re: Violation of LiveJournal abuse policies

You seem to have an interesting opinion on what constitutes as "harassment" here. Posting an excerpt from a police blotter is not harassment. Posting links to news articles as warnings is not harassment. Posting first-hand, personal experiences is not harassment. The fact that you seem bent on claiming that all of the above evidence is - somehow - miraculously - untrue does not instantly make it a violation in terms.

But I forgot - you're just an innocent little lamb in all this, aren't you? Standing up to stones thrown by all those terrible, "geeky" people who owe you money.
